“Sri Lanka Canada Business Council represents a significant group of businesses that link with Canada for Trade and Investment and joint ventures. These businesses employ thousands of workers in the country and will require thousands more in the coming years,” Country Director, World University Service of Canada (WUSC) Richard Bonokoski said at the signing of a MoU between WUSC and Sri Lanka Canada Business Council at Canada House, Colombo.

With the signing of this MoU, WUSC will address the training needs of Sri Lanka with the Ministry of Youth Affairs, skill development and its agencies by building partnerships.

The partnership between education and training organization and a Business Council comprised competent members to produce goods and services is the best combination as WUSC works with training partners to build the capacity of women and young people in Sri Lanka. The WUSC also helps train individuals to find gainful employment and be productive.

“When training providers plan and schedule their programmes together with businesses, they make sure they are training young people for real jobs in a real job market” he said.

President Sri Lanka Canada Business Council Sampath Liyanage also spoke.
